Magic System — Visual Rules

Core Principle

Magic is not a special effect but a manifestation of interiority. It changes form, color, and intensity based on:

- Who casts it (personal identity and emotional state)

- How well they know themselves (self-awareness level)
- Their intention (benevolent vs. destructive)
- Their connection to the Sigillum (equilibrium alignment)

Visual Manifestation

Aileen's Magic: Starts as scattered light, gradually focuses into brilliant beams. Color shifts from white to golden as she grows.

Dorcha's/Glàre's Magic: Begins dark, turbulent, almost violent. Transforms into radiant, controlled light as he embraces his true identity.

Grogher's Magic: Earthy, grounded, surprisingly gentle. Reflects his pure heart despite fearsome appearance.

The Sigillum Maximum

Visual representation of cosmic balance. When intact: golden, harmonious, pulsing with gentle light. When shattered: fragments scatter as dark crystals, each representing a broken connection between kingdoms.

Key Sequences — Visual Notes

The Destruction of Nuvolandia

The Black Knight's arrival: a dark cloud unlike any other, swallowing light.
The Sigillum shattering: not an explosion but a crystalline fracture spreading through reality. The petrification: not instant but a wave of stone converting living beings into statues mid-motion.

Aileen's Transformation

From sheltered princess to warrior-mage. Visual progression: royal dresses → practical travel clothes → battle-worn armor → mage robes that blend all kingdom styles. Each outfit change marks a story milestone.

The Seven Trials

Each secret recovery is visually distinct, reflecting the kingdom and the personal growth required. The Illusion trial: reality bends, mirrors multiply. The Siren transformation: beauty becomes prison. The final sacrifice: light consuming the sacrificer.

The Final Ascension

Aileen and Glàre transformed into angels of light. Not traditional winged figures but beings of pure luminous energy, their human forms barely visible within the radiance. They leave behind not bodies but statues of light, memorials to their sacrifice.
